No worry on student loans, Davis tells financial aid officers

Despite unnerving news across the country regarding student loans, Andy Davis, ISAC Executive Director, assured an annual gathering of student financial aid administrators that education loans will be available for Illinois students this fall. Davis described a positive meeting with the U.S. Secretary of Education and characterized lenders' proper role as that of "investment bankers in human capital." Davis also urged the financial aid officers to learn about and engage in the Illinois Public Agenda for Higher Education, telling the group that student financial assistance is critical for both student opportunity and civil society.

Easy being green

As part of its continued efforts to communicate the broad-based contributions of higher education to society at large, the American Council on Education is launching a new Solutions for Our Future website, Higher Education Goes Green. The site will highlight green initiatives at campuses across the country in the areas of research, conservation, and best practices.

A compelling case to focus on high-need schools

The Associated Colleges of Illinois' Center for Success in High-Need Schools presented its 3rd annual symposium, "From Classroom Success to Community Responsibility: The Compelling Case for Improving Teaching and Learning in High-Need Schools," on April 17. Among the speakers was IBHE Executive Director Judy Erwin, who stated the case: "Making a compelling case for improving teaching and learning in high-need schools has never been more important, nor more urgent."

Harper College bill gets new life

HB 1434, commonly known as the Harper College bill, was reported out of the Senate Rules Committee this week and assigned to the State Government and Veterans Affairs Committee. The bill, now sponsored by Sen. Dan Kotowski, would give Harper College permission to offer two pilot baccalaureate completion programs.

Meanwhile, the General Assembly left Springfield for a week-long Passover recess after a flurry of activity to pass bills in the house or origin by the third reading deadlines, which, at least in the Senate, have been extended to the end of May.
Bills of interest to higher education include:

HB 4903 (Rep. Jakobsson) – Requires publishers of textbooks to disclose retail price, revision history, and existence of alternative formats, and to offer textbooks “unbundled” from supplementary materials. 3rd Reading in the House.

HB 5059 (Rep. Brosnahan) – Requires Department of Public Health to provide scholarships for nurse educators for up to 3 years. Passed the House.

HB 5109 (Rep. Miller) – Creates the MAP-Challenge program to encourage low-income students to finish high school and take a rigorous college-prep curriculum in exchange for a guarantee of financial aid incentives upon entering college. Passed House, referred to Senate Rules.

SB 1908 (Sen. Maloney) – Increases the maximum award for Monetary Award Program grants by $500 per year, with similar percentage increases for students not subject to the maximum award, such as community college students. 2nd Reading in Senate.

SB 1982 (Sen. Frerichs) – Directs IBHE to emphasize high-demand occupational fields, such as STEM areas and nursing, in awarding grants under the Cooperative Work-Study Grant program. Passed the Senate, referred to House Rules.

Urban League study assesses economic future of African Americans in Chicago

White males are nearly 3 times as likely as black males to hold a college degree and more than 4 times as likely to hold a graduate degree. These are among statistics cited in a study by the Chicago Urban League that concluded that improving educational attainment among African Americans will be a key driver for economic change in the minority community.

Mike Lawrence to retire from Paul Simon Institute

Mike Lawrence, who has had a distinguished career as a journalist and served as press secretary to Governor Jim Edgar, has announced he will step down next fall as director of the Paul Simon Public Policy Institute at Southern Illinois University.

FIICU lobby day promotes MAP funding, research grants

Nearly 70 students participated in the Federation's private college student lobby day in Springfield on April 2nd. Students from a dozen different colleges and universities met with legislators and legislative leaders to emphasize the importance of protecting funding for the Monetary Award Program (MAP). The students also urged legislators to sign on as co-sponsors to SB 1908 which will increase the statutory cap on award sizes for the first time since 2001 and asked them to seek restoration of the Higher Education Matching Grant funding which was eliminated by the Governor in 2007.

Grant program seeks to engage students in service

The Corporation for National and Community Service (the Corporation) has announced that $2.3 million of grant funding is available to support better engagement of college students in service through social media. Examples of social media include: social networking (i.e. Facebook, MySpace), podcasts, blogs, RSS feeds, social bookmarking, widgets, etc. Successful applicants must demonstrate how their program can use these tools to engage increased numbers of college students, especially in partnership with other nonprofit or for-profit entities.

CA: Governor Schwarzenegger's higher education cuts met with resistance
Higher education officials across California are galvanizing in protest against Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger's proposed 10 percent cut in higher education funding. The cuts outlined by the governor would mean reductions in financial aid, fewer classes, and decreases in student services, according to university officials. They believe the universities still have not recovered from previous cuts and may not recover from the governor's proposed cuts for 10 years. Los Angeles Times

KY: Editorial: Foolish cuts to higher education
The editorial board of the Cincinnati Enquirer chides Kentucky lawmakers for making a "gutless short-term fix" by cutting higher education funding to balance the state budget. The editors believe institutions of higher education are of great economic benefit to the region and state, and that increases in college graduation rates and the creation of new degree programs tied to growth industries will garner new businesses. Cincinnati Enquirer

MO: Missouri Senate approves 7.8 percent higher education funding increase
The Missouri Senate has approved funding increases of 7.8 percent for higher education, translating to a total budget of $451.7 million for the University of Missouri System. However, some lawmakers argue that this budget is still less than 2001 levels, and that funds are being diverted to scholarship programs at private colleges and universities. Columbia Missourian
